Tells the story of Raymond, a twelve-year-old boy, who is bullied verbally and physically by a group of boys at school. Shows how he becomes friends with Louie, a new boy at school, and how this friendship helps him deal with the bullying. Depicts how Raymond is left alone again after Louie's family moves away. Shows how, the next day, Raymond runs into the street to escape from a crowd of boys and is hit by a car. Tells how the students learn later in the day how Raymond lost his parents and a little brother to a car accident three years earlier. Shows how one of the bullies learns that his brother was bullied by an older boy at school and looks at his own behavior toward others. Shows how the students learn that Raymond will be okay and how to of the bullies show their relief at the news. Stresses the importance of friendship.

Connect With Kids Series - Part 1 presents a case of cyber-bullying that nearly ruined a young teenage girl's reputation. This episode also introduces the I-Safe America campaign and the need for parents to take an active role in Internet safety initiatives. In the second episode, a gay teenager expresses his sense of alienation and tells of the harassment he has received since elementary school. Part 3 puts the blame for school shootings clearly on the bullying and teenage cliques that used to be tolerated in junior high and high schools. In Part 4 a teenage girl who developed at a young age, expresses how difficult life has been for her. This episode is a success story, however, as she and her mother confront school authorities in an effort to solve the problem. Part 5 affirms the need for parents to be aware of all the kinds of bullying their children may be experiencing and for them to take action on behalf of their children.

Kai is being physically bullied and intimidated by Kevin and Jose. Dana is tormenting and taunting Tara about her weight. Both of them are feeling humiliated, hurt and powerless to stop it. Kai's friend Dylan witnesses the bullying but remains silent about the bullying. Friends encourage Kai to seek help from their club advisor, who then steps in. Tara's mother helps her see that she is not to blame for the harassment, and if she gets more involved at school with things she enjoys, she will feel better about herself and not "buy into" what Dana is saying about her.

It's a Girl's World: A Documentary About Social Bullying

64496 VC, DV
52 min 2004 National Film Board of Canada

Interviews a clique of ten year old girls to isolate a disturbing picture of how they use their closest friendships to hurt each other. When the girls interact with the author of a book on aggression in girls, they begin to see the cruelty of their actions and to learn alternative methods of coping with hurt feelings. With the assistance of sympathetic parents, the girls gradually learn to apologize and move on. Parts 5 & 6 shatter the myth that social bullying among girls is an acceptable part of growing up. It recounts the true story of a teenage girl who committed suicide as a result of social bullying, including the harassment, suicide note and subsequent legal case.

Harassment, no matter what form it takes - bullying, gossiping, ostracism, hazing, sexual harassment - makes the school experience difficult, frightening, even threatening for many students and disruptive for just about everyone. When schools acknowledge this problem and actively work to combat it, the environment improves for everyone. almost one out of every three students between the ages of 11 and 18 has experienced some form of harassment. High school students need to be able to recognize bullying and harassment for what it is, understand that such behaviors are not acceptable and should not be tolerated, and be provided with strategies for dealing with harassment. This Sunburst media staff development program is designed to help teachers, counselors and administrators understand the components of a successful program to create a school environment in which harassment behavior is not accepted or tolerated. The program will: help you identify the different forms of harassment; present intervention techniques for harassment, as well as strategies you can teach students to help them handle it; and review guidelines for creating a harassment-free school environment. Woven throughout the program are scenarios from the Sunburst Media Series Empower Yourself, six programs for grades 7 to 12 that deal with different kinds of harassment and show how to handle them.

Connect With Kids Series - In Part 1, a teenage girl explains how verbal bullying can alienate teenagers to the point of making them suicidal. Part 2 extends this concept of bullying to Internet chat rooms where reputations are often destroyed by unthinking teenagers. In a case study, two middle school girls re-establish a friendship that was destroyed by slanderous Internet postings. The "Fighting Back" in Part 3 includes having children change schools when necessary, recognizing sexual harassment in teenage behaviors, supporting anti-bullying programs, and understanding that when teenagers discuss their potential violent acts, these warnings should be taken seriously. In the bullying workshop, teenagers role-play appropriate responses for times when they are being bullied.

This production weaves together several dramatic strands, creating a unique and candid view of how bullying directly correlates to the rise of school violence in schools. In one strand, viewers follow a fictionalized story of a confused teenager toting a backpack as he rides a bus to school. Through his narration we learn of his inner frustrations and it becomes increasingly clear that he is armed and prepared to use his concealed weapon. In another strand, we see and hear the voices and pictures of real teens videotaping and questioning their own peers about the devastating effects of bullying and violence in and around their schools.

IJ 24 min 2008 Human Relations Media

While the Internet is a place of promise and progress, it is also a place of peril for young teens. Chat rooms, e-mail, sites such as MySpace, and instant messaging allow teens to keep in touch with friends, but also offer the potential for youngsters to be abused in ways they have not considered. Using real teens in a peer-to-peer format, this video helps teens navigate problems and learn important rules and strategies to keep them safe while surfing the net. Program explores online bullying and rumor spreading, identity theft, blogging and the real threat of sexual predators. Viewers learn to "think before you click" in order to avoid embarrassing yourself or hurting others, while keeping yourself and others safe. Your students will conclude that while the Internet is a fun, exciting place, it is always important to be smart about what you say and whom you befriend online.

IJ 14 min 2007 Sunburst Visual Media

Harassment Young teens see harassment everyday. Some are perpetrators. Some are victims. All are witnesses. What should you do if you are harassed? What should you do if you see harassment? These four scenarios help teens find answers to those questions. Adam's friends hear his mother and sister call him 'Einstein.' When his friends start calling him that Adam asks them not to, but they won't stop. When does good-natured teasing become harassment? Lily likes to wear 'hippy style' clothes and is constantly taunted in school and online. How can emotional harassment be just as hurtful as physical harassment? Luke takes pleasure in bullying Dan. When asked why he does it, Luke says he isn't doing anything to Dan that his brothers don't do to him. How can bullying hurt the bully as well as the target? TEACHER VERSION
